

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

The Secretary of the State then introduced to the Convention Lauren L. Nettleton of Killingworth, the oldest delegate, who acted as temporary chairman, and called the Convention to order.

CONVENTION RESOLUTIONS.

Convention Resolution No. 1. Mr. Cheney of Manchester introduced a resolution appointing Messrs. Phelps of Vernon, Brown of Norwich, and Davenport of Bridgeport, as a committee on Credentials.

The resolution was passed.

The committee retired and soon reported through Mr. Phelps of Vernon that the roll of the Convention as read by the Secretary of the State is the correct roll of the membership of the Convention.

On motion of Mr. Hall of Willington the report of the committee was accepted.

The chairman then stated that the next business in order was the election of a President of the Convention.

Mr. Warner of Salisbury nominated for President Honorable Charles B. Andrews of Litchfield, and moved that he be elected by acclamation.

The motion prevailed, and the chairman declared Honorable Charles B. Andrews elected President.

The President then addressed the Convention as follows:

Gentlemen of the Convention: Our meeting together has been ordered by the people of the State to consider their present Constitution — whether or not any changes should be made in it and if so what those changes shall be. A constitution is that body of rules and maxims in accordance with which the powers of sovereignty are habitually exercised, and its provisions are the rule of conduct for those branches of the government which administer the sovereign power. The American idea of a constitution is that its rules are fundamental; that upon these the structure of the government depends, and it is intended to be permanent. The powers of sovereignty cannot be readily changed. The American idea of a constitution has in it the further element that it rests on the consent of the governed.

One of the most philosophic of historians, in bringing together various of the pithy sayings into which the teachings of history have been crystallized, among others mentions this: "The doubtful precedents of one generation become the fundamental maxims of a soon succeeding one." The history of the people of the State of Connecticut furnishes a most striking example of the truth of this aphorism. It is less than 300 years since Thomas Hooker, right here in Hartford, said in respect to the choosing of magistrates that the foundation of authority is in the consent of the people. It was a doubtful saying at the time. But within a few generations it became an acknowledged principle with the American people that governments derive all their just powers from the consent of the governed.

Those who heard Thomas Hooker put his precepts into immediate practice. They established certain fundamental orders for their own government to which all those governed did actually give their consent. At that time a Constitution by that name was not known. But those orders, in truth, were a Constitution. They furnished the rules in accordance with which all the powers and functions of their government were habitually exercised. The fundamental orders continued in full force till the charter came. The colonists never gave their consent to the charter in the same sense that they had given it to the fundamental orders. They were, however, wise in their generation. They administered their government under the charter with such skill, that while they avoided any offense to royalty it is difficult for the student today to see where, in the effectiveness of essential principles, the fundamental orders were ever displaced. Rather, on the other hand, the orders seem never to have been displaced. As we look back to the government of the colony the charter seems, in practice, to have been regarded not as a substitute for the fundamental orders but as a recognition of the government which had previously existed, and a confirmation of the rights and privileges which the colonists had enjoyed from the first.

In 1818 a Constitution, strictly so called, was adopted. For more than eighty years it has given to our State a very high degree of prosperity; and it has afforded to all our people a measure of personal and civic liberty which has attracted the notice and met with the commendation of all lovers of free government everywhere. And now we are met to discuss changes in that Constitution. The importance of our labor cannot well be overstated. Changes in fundamental principles, principles which are in very truth fundamental, cannot be made without changing the structure of the government. Such changes ought not to be made except for the very highest reasons.

In the application of fundamental principles to the work of administration, changes must be made from time to time. The constantly varying conditions of social and political life make such changes necessary. The prosperity of our State, the freedom and happiness of its people afford strong confirmation that the principles as well as the details of the government under which we have thus far lived are not radically defective. It will be ours to enlarge and confirm rather than to overthrow or deny. We may make an extended application of acknowledged truths to exigencies which, however long anticipated, could not until now be defined. We may thus establish judicious reforms without any startling change. To change is not the same thing as to reform. With the Constitution as it is we know we have had prosperity. But in this behalf the prospect does not occasion us any anxiety. Only a very few changes in our Constitution are suggested. That instrument has given to our people so satisfactory a government that for the most part it has escaped all serious criticism. Very obviously it will be the part of prudence to confine our labors to those few particulars where change is thought to be desirable. Would it not be worse than folly to change any feature of our fundamental law which has endured almost a century and has always given satisfaction? Antiquity of time affords added stability to the State and added security to life and possessions. To be associated with you, gentlemen, in your deliberations is itself a privilege of which I might well be proud. For the distinguished part in these deliberations, which you have assigned me, I am deeply and profoundly grateful. It is my desire, as it is my hope, to be able to execute the trust with a faithful regard for the rights of the members of the Convention, and the interests of the people of the State; that I may discharge these duties with strict impartiality, and with unremitting assiduity and attention. Beyond these my own endeavors, gentlemen, I am as every one must be who stands in the position that I now accept at your hands, a suppliant for your co-operation, consideration, and forbearance.

Prayer was then offered by Rev. E. P. Parker of Hartford, as follows:

Almighty God, who ever reignest over all the works of Thy hands in the same sovereignty of justice, wisdom, love, and power in which Thou hast created and fashioned them; assembled in this place dedicated to the high uses of this commonwealth, on a grave errand of the people concerning their political welfare, we pause for a brief space, as is meet and right, to bow the knee of our minds and hearts before Thee in humble and reverent recognition of Thine authority in the governments of earthly states and kingdoms, and in the earnest imploration of Thy guidance and blessing for all who compose this Convention, through all the stages of their deliberations and proceedings.

Bestow, O Lord, we beseech Thee, upon these Thy servants all needful wisdom for the right and proper discharge of their several responsibilities. Give them a right judgment in all things that come before them. Direct and further their proceedings to the end that the counsels of truth, justice, and patriotism may prevail and be established in their conclusions.

We call to mind with grateful hearts, as our fathers have told us, what work Thou didst in their days, in the times of old. They trusted in Thee and were not confounded. They looked to Thee and were enlightened. Walking humbly and bravely by Thy guidance they prepared the way for us to dwell here in all the plenitude of our liberties and prosperities.

God of our fathers, who didst so lead them by the hand of illustrious men, be likewise our God, and the God of our children and children's children, from generation to generation. Let Thy blessing, O Lord, be upon our beloved country; upon our President and all associated with him in authority; upon this ancient commonwealth so dear to us all; upon its present Governor and all who share with him the administration of public affairs; and upon our whole people. And graciously grant that the course of things may be so wisely and peaceably ordered, both here and now and in the times to come, that when we shall have gone hence, and from age to age, there may still survive and flourish in this commonwealth of Connecticut an honest, orderly, free, religious, and happy people, jealous of ancestral virtues, proud of a noble history, and zealous for future welfare and fame.

And unto Thy holy name, Eternal God, be rendered all might and majesty, dominion and glory, both now and evermore. Amen.

Mr. Osborn of New Haven moved to amend the amendment by substituting for the motion Convention Resolution No. 32 (see Convention Journal, January 8th).

Mr. Loomis of Glastonbury raised the point of order that the resolution which was sought to be substituted by Mr. Osborn had already been acted on in the committee and was now out of order.

The Chairman ruled that while the subject matter contained in the proposed amendment had been acted on by the committee in another connection, it was now offered as an amendment to a different proposition from that which it was sought to amend by it before, and was therefore in order.

Mr. Smith of Plymouth raised the point of order that the committee having already passed a resolution in favor of equal representation, the amendment proposed, providing for representation according to population, was not in order.

The Chairman ruled that while the committee had voted in favor of equal representation it had also voted against amendments providing for one and for two representatives from each town, and the vote in favor of "equal" representation might therefore, so far as now appeared, mean equality according to population; the amendment proposed, inasmuch as it tends toward equality according to population, was therefore not necessarily inconsistent with the previous action and consequently in order.

Mr. Loomis of Glastonbury appealed from the ruling of the Chairman.

Under privilege granted by the Chairman, the appeal was discussed by Messrs. Brown of Norwich, Clark of Haddam, Gillette of Burlington, and Clark of Hartford.

By unanimous consent Mr. Osborn of New Haven withdrew his amendment, and the appeal was accordingly not acted upon.

The amendment was discussed by Messrs. Warner of Salisbury and Davenport of Bridgeport.

Mr. Milner of Plainfield moved to amend the amendment by inserting the figures " 36 " in lieu of the figures " 84."

The Chairman stated that the amendment offered by Mr. Waller would be first put, as it contained the largest number.

Mr. Waller of New London raised the point of order that the proposed amendment to the amendment should be first put.

The Chairman ruled that in principle there was no difference between a motion made to fill a blank with a number and an amendment containing a number, and that the largest number should be put first in taking the sense of the committee.

The amendment offered by Mr. Waller of New London did not prevail.

Mr. Waller of New London moved to amend by inserting the figures " 80."

The Chairman ruled that the proposed amendment was not in order until the amendment offered by Mr. Milner of Plainfield had been acted on.

That the House of Representatives shall consist of only one representative from each town.

Resolved by the Committee of the Whole:

That we are in favor of a Senate based upon population, located in contiguous territory, elected by districts, provided that no town shall be divided except for the purpose of forming more than one district within such town.

Mr. Hall of West Hartford moved that the report be tabled.

The motion prevailed.

On motion of Mr. Warner of Salisbury, the Convention, at 4.21 o'clock P. M., adjourned, to meet on Thursday, at 11 o'clock A. M.

Mr. Northrop of Brookfield moved that the Convention Journal of March 13th be corrected so as to show his name as voting in the affirmative on Sections 1, 2, and 3 of Article III, instead of absent and not voting.

The motion prevailed.

The President stated that the question before the Convention was the motion made by Mr. Perry of Fairfield to amend Section 3 of Article Third by Schedule "B" (see Convention Journal, March 13th, p. 219).

Mr. Maltbie of Granby had raised the point of order that the motion to amend came too late and was not in order.

The point of order was pending when the Convention adjourned on March 13th.

The President ruled that the point of order was well taken, because at the time the amendment was offered, Section 3 was not before the Convention, and hence the amendment was not in order.

Mr. Perry of Fairfield moved that the previous question be ordered on the motion of Mr. Maltbie of Granby, that the entire resolution (No. 174), as amended, comprising Article Third of the Constitution be adopted (see Convention Journal, March 12th, p. 206), claiming that this was the motion reconsidered on March 13th (see Convention Journal, March 13th), and that this motion was now pending, notwithstanding action on constituent sections of the Article, since it had not been acted on or withdrawn, and the motions to act on certain sections not being offered in lieu of or as substitutes for this original motion.

The President stated that he understood the motions to take action by Sections to carry out the motion reconsidered, and that he saw no distinction between action on Article Third as a whole and the action taken.

Mr. Maltbie of Granby stated that he would withdraw the motion made by him and not now acted upon.

Mr. Brown of Norwich raised the point of order that after a motion had been acted on and reconsidered it was so far in the hands of the Convention that it could not be withdrawn.

The President ruled that the withdrawal was in order under Convention Rule 15, and that the point of order was not well taken.

The General Assembly shall by law prescribe the manner in which all questions concerning the election of the above named officers shall be determined.

Sec. 18. The Treasurer shall receive all moneys belonging to the State, and disburse the same only as he may be directed by law. He shall pay no warrant or order for the disbursement of public money, until the same has been registered in the office of the Comptroller.

He shall be the keeper of the seal of the State, which shall not be altered.

He shall prescribe the mode of keeping and rendering all public accounts. He shall ex officio be one of the auditors of the accounts of the Treasurer. The General Assembly may assign to him other duties in relation to his office, and to that of the Treasurer, and shall prescribe the manner in which his duties shall be performed.

They shall become bound, with sufficient sureties, to the Treasurer of the State, for the faithful discharge of the duties of their office, in such manner as shall be prescribed by law. They shall be removable by the General Assembly. In case the sheriff of any county shall die, resign, or shall be removed from office by the General Assembly, the Governor may fill the vacancy occasioned thereby, until the same shall be filled by the next quadrennial election.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE.

(Convention Resolution No. 41. (See Convention Journal, January 8th.) Mr. Merritt of Stamford, chairman of the committee appointed to consider and report on Article Fifth of the Judicial Department of the proposed Constitution, presented the following resolution, Convention Resolution No. 41, a resolution that the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Errors shall extend to errors both of law and fact, as a majority report of said committee recommending that the same be adopted by the Convention.

The report is as follows:

The section proposed by File No. 79 is intended to cover the same point as was covered by section 7 of chapter 174 of the Public Acts of 1893, which is as follows:

"Sec. 7. Either party may appeal, from any finding or refusal to find any fact, to the Supreme Court of Errors in the manner now by law provided."

This same subject was again the subject of legislation in the acts of 1897, chapter 194, section 10, in which it is provided :

“Sec. 10. Every such exception may be assigned as a reason of appeal, and the Supreme Court of Errors shall review all questions of fact raised by such appeals, and if it appears that the finding of the court does not present the questions of law decided by the trial court, said Supreme Court of Errors shall correct said finding. And if the Supreme Court of Errors shall find that material facts have been found against the evidence, or without evidence, or material facts have been proved and not found, the court shall grant a new trial.”

With regard to the act of 1893 the supreme court held that it could not under the Constitution review questions of fact. The syllabus of the case of Styles vs. Tyler, 64 Conn., 432, is as follows :

“The Supreme Court of Errors, as established by the Constitution of this state, is a court of last resort for the correction of errors, and its jurisdiction as described in the Constitution relates to the determination of principles of law, and not to the trial or retrial of pure questions of fact.

“In view of such jurisdiction, Chapter 174 of the Public Acts of 1893 cannot be construed as requiring this court to determine, upon evidence spread upon the record, questions of pure fact settled by the judgment of the trial court.”

The decision in this case was by a bare majority of the court, while two dissented. From the dissenting opinion of Judge Baldwin we take the following extract as giving a clear historical statement of the question involved :

It is asserted in the opinion of the court that the creation of a Supreme Court of Errors in 1874 “was the deliberate adoption into our system of judicature of the fundamental principle, which has ever since characterized it, that the certainty of our jurisprudence as well as the security of parties litigant depends upon confining the jurisdiction of a court of last resort to the settlement of rules of law;" or, as it is elsewhere phrased, "the underlying principle involved was that the administration of justice is not safe when the court of last resort for the settlement of the law, in the exercise of an absolute and final power, can render judgment on facts and law so intermingled that its decision is not simply the declaration of the law but may become the arbitration of the case." This principle, it is affirmed, was incorporated in our Constitution by force of the name given to this court, because it "expressed the conviction of the people that a jurisdiction of mixed law and fact vested in any court of last resort, exercising a supreme and uncontrolled power, was inconsistent with a sound system of jurisprudence and was dangerous to the administration of justice." But the framers of our Constitution were familiar with the practice of English chancery, as well as with that in the courts of the United States. A party aggrieved by a decree of the Lord Chancellor could always appeal, and have his case reheard on the same evidence in the House of Lords. 2 Madd. Ch., 435. In chancery only were the facts determined by the court, and while England was content to make the verdict of a jury final, in ordinary cases, it refused from the first to accord similar respect to the findings of any single judge. The Judiciary Act of the United States, adopted by Congress in 1789, and which was largely the work of one of the greatest lawyers and judges of Connecticut, Oliver Ellsworth, followed in the same lines, by restricting the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, in actions at law, to the remedy by writ of error, while giving a general appeal from final decrees in equity or admiralty. In 1796 Ellsworth, as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, referred to this distinction as to the right of review, in these words: "An appeal is a process of civil law origin, and removes a cause entirely; subjecting the fact as well as the law, to a review and re-trial; but a writ of error is a process of common law origin, and it removes nothing for re-examination but the law." Wiscart vs. Dauchy, 3 Dallas, 327.

Pierpont Edwards, the chairman of the committee appointed by the Convention of 1818 to report a draft of a Constitution, and who, as such, reported this article as to the judiciary, was, at the time, the judge of the District Court of the United States for this district. Stephen Mix Mitchell, William Bristol, Nathan Smith, Alexander Wolcott (who had been nominated by President Madison a few years before as an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States), William Hungerford, John S. Peters, and others familiar with the practice in the Federal courts, were members of the convention. Then, as now, this mode of re-hearing equity causes in those courts, on appeal, upon both fact and law, was familiar and acceptable to the bar. It was seldom that the appellate court differed from the trial court in its conclusions of fact, and only when they were deemed to be clearly against the weight of evidence. For over a century the Supreme Court of the United States has exercised this "jurisdiction of mixed law and fact," in a large and important class of causes, with "supreme and uncontrolled power," and Congress has recently given similar powers to the Circuit Courts of Appeals. I cannot believe that the Convention of 1818 was convinced that the existence of such a jurisdiction "was inconsistent with a sound system of jurisprudence, and was dangerous to the administration of justice."

Similar legislation to that of the United States has been had (following the English chancery practice) in many of our States, and has occasioned no inconvenience which has not been thought to be outweighed by the advantages gained. Reed vs. Reed, 114 Mass., 372; Baird vs. Mayor, 96 N. Y., 567; Worrall's Appeal, 110 Pa. State, 349; 1 Atlantic Rep., 380; Deacon vs. Van Nuys, 129 Ind., 580; 28 Northeastern Rep., 865; Baker vs. Rockabrand, 118 Ills., 365; 8 Northeastern Rep., 546; Code of Iowa, Sec. 2472; See also Public Statutes of R. I., Rev. of 1882, p. 526, Sec. 8.

The opinion of the court declares that "the Supreme Court of Errors is not a supreme court for all purposes, but a supreme court only for the correction of errors in law; if its jurisdiction also included the determination of facts, it would then be supreme for all purposes, and its name a misnomer." This seems to me to confuse a jurisdiction for the determination of facts with a jurisdiction for the determination of errors of fact. If a trial court comes to erroneous conclusions of fact, the revision of its action, by correcting the errors in its conclusions, is a determination of the facts, only as a mode of the redress of errors. In many cases, indeed, a finding of fact may be, of itself, an error of law. It is so when it is made without any evidence of the fact, as to matters not the subject of judicial notice. The E. A. Packer, 140 U. S., 360; Mason vs. Lord, 40 N. Y., 476. And to refuse to find a material fact which was in issue and was proved by uncontradicted evidence, is also an error of law. U. S. vs. Adams, 9 Wall., 661; Commercial Union Assurance Co. vs. Scammon, 126 Ills., 355; 18 Northeastern Rep., 562; Whitman vs. Winchester Repeating Arms Co., 55 Conn., 247; Kennedy vs. Porter, 109 N. Y., 526; 17 Northeastern Rep., 426; Bedlow vs. N. Y. Floating Dry Dock Co., 112 N. Y., 263; 19 Northeastern Rep., 800; Fernald vs. Bush, 131 Mass., 591.

The law as stated by the majority of the court has since been reaffirmed and may now be considered as the settled law of this State, namely, that the Supreme Court will not review a case on a question of fact.

The situation thus is that difficult and important questions of fact are tried before one man, and his decision is absolutely final, with no review whatsoever.

This practice is at least unusual, for it does not exist either in England or in the United States courts, or so far as the committee is aware, in the practice of any of the States of this Union.

Inasmuch as in the practice of this State more than the usual number of cases are tried before the judge alone, it appears to be more than usually important that an appeal shall lie to some court, so that the conclusions of fact, which are in many cases the principal questions, should be capable of review.

It is shown by our reports that a large proportion of cases decided by judges are reversed for errors in law.

These questions of law are no more difficult or intricate than many questions of fact, and a judge is just as liable to make error in findings of fact as he is in findings of law, and the same reasons of justice require that his conclusions on questions of fact should be reviewable on appeal.

Your committee therefore recommend the adoption of the resolution.

By order of the committee (the delegate from Vernon not concurring).

SCHUYLER MERRITT, Chairman.

On motion of Mr. Merritt of Stamford, the report was tabled, and ordered printed in the Journal.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE.

Mr. Perry of Fairfield, Chairman of the committee appointed to prepare and report on a final draft of the Constitution, presented a draft thereof (File No. 151), together with an accompanying report, recommending its passage.

The report is as follows :

To the Constitutional Convention :

The Committee appointed to put the entire Constitution, when finally approved in articles by the Convention, into proper form for submission to the people, recommends the arrangement and phraseology of the draft thereof which accompanies this report.

Although confined by the terms of our appointment to recommendations relating to the form in which principles already adopted should be expressed, we venture to also call the attention of the Convention to the following facts:

1. The expression "and at such other times as the General Assembly shall judge necessary," occurring in lines 5 and 6, Sec. 2, Art. 3, seems to permit the ordering of annual, semi-annual, or even more frequent "stated sessions" by mere legislative act.

2. Inasmuch as the proposed Constitution will become operative immediately upon its adoption, it is not clear how a lawful General Assembly could thereafter convene, inasmuch as — among other reasons — the new districts from which the Senators must come could not be established.

3. Sec. 13, Art. 3, authorizes the General Assembly to provide by law for the transportation of its members, but leaves the exercise of that power optional with it. The last paragraph of the section, however, makes it obligatory upon the Comptroller to do the same thing, thus placing the matter of transportation under two separate and independent jurisdictions, one of which may and the other of which must act.

4. Sec. 11, Art. 4, does not seem to be complete without the addition of the words "unless the General Assembly by adjournment prevents such return," at the end of the section.

5. It is thought that the tribunal authorized by Sec. 6, Art. 5, should also have jurisdiction over questions of law, if the apparent desire of the Convention is to be accomplished.

The foregoing suggestions are made in order that the Convention may take further action in the premises, if it so desires.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Hartford, Conn., April 30, 1902.

The following is the proposed Constitution as adopted :

THE CONSTITUTION OF CONNECTICUT.

PREAMBLE.

The people of Connecticut, acknowledging with gratitude the providence of God which has permitted them to enjoy a free government, and desiring to perpetuate the liberties, rights, and privileges which they have derived from their ancestors, do, after careful consideration, ordain and establish the following constitution and form of civil government.

ARTICLE FIRST.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. All men, when they form a social compact, are equal in rights; no man or set of men is entitled to exclusive public emoluments or privileges; and no citizen shall be deprived of any right or privilege or exempted from any obligation on account of race or color.

SECTION 2.* All political power is inherent in the people; all free governments are founded on their authority, and instituted for their benefit; and they have at all times an indefeasible right to alter their form of government in such manner as they may think expedient.

SECTION 3. The exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship shall be forever free, and without discrimination; but the right hereby declared and established shall not excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace and safety of the state.

SECTION 4. No preference shall be given by law to any religious sect or mode of worship.

SECTION 5. No law shall be passed to curtail or restrain the liberty of speech or of the press, but every person may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty.

SECTION 6. In all criminal prosecutions for libel the truth may be given in evidence, and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the court.

SECTION 7. No person shall be arrested, detained, or punished except in cases clearly warranted by law.

SECTION 8. All prisoners shall, before conviction, be bailable by sufficient sureties, except in case of capital offenses where the proof is evident or the presumption great; and the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, except by the general assembly, and only when, in case of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

SECTION 9. Excessive bail shall not be required nor excessive fines imposed.

SECTION 10. All courts shall be open, and every person for any injury done to him in his person, property, or reputation, shall have remedy by due course of law, and right and justice administered without delay.

SECTION 11. The right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.

SECTION 12. In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to be heard by himself and by counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accujustify practices inconsistent with the peace and safety of the state.

SECTION 4. No preference shall be given by law to any religious sect or mode of worship.

SECTION 5. No law shall be passed to curtail or restrain the liberty of speech or of the press, but every person may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty.

SECTION 6. In all criminal prosecutions for libel the truth may be given in evidence, and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the court.

SECTION 7. No person shall be arrested, detained, or punished except in cases clearly warranted by law.

SECTION 8. All prisoners shall, before conviction, be bailable by sufficient sureties, except in case of capital offenses where the proof is evident or the presumption great; and the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, except by the general assembly, and only when, in case of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

SECTION 9. Excessive bail shall not be required nor excessive fines imposed.

SECTION 10. All courts shall be open, and every person for any injury done to him in his person, property, or reputation, shall have remedy by due course of law, and right and justice administered without delay.

SECTION 11. The right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.

SECTION 12. In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to be heard by himself and by counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation ; to be confronted by the witnesses against him ; to have compulsory process to obtain witnesses in his favor ; and, in all prosecutions by indictment or information, a speedy public trial by an impartial jury. He shall not be compelled to give evidence against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. No person shall be holden to answer for any crime, the punishment of which may be death or imprisonment for life, without presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in the land or naval forces, or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger. No person shall, for the same offense, be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb.

SECTION 13. The people shall be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and possessions from unreasonable searches or seizures. No warrant to search any place, or to seize any person or thing, shall issue without describing them as nearly as may be, nor without probable cause supported by oath or affirmation.

SECTION 14. No person shall be attainted of treason or felony by the general assembly.

SECTION 15. The property of no person shall be taken for public use without just compensation therefor.

SECTION 16. The citizens have a right peaceably to assemble for their common good, and to apply to those invested with the powers of government for redress of grievances, or for other proper purposes, by petition, address, or remonstrance.

SECTION 17. Every citizen has a right to bear arms in defense of himself and the state.

SECTION 18. The military shall at all times be in strict subordination to the civil power.

SECTION 19. No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; or in time of war, except in the manner prescribed by law.

SECTION 20. No hereditary emoluments, privileges, or honors shall be granted or conferred.

ARTICLE SECOND.

OF THE DISTRIBUTION OF POWERS.

The powers of government shall be divided into three distinct departments, to wit, legislative, executive, and judicial, and each of said departments shall be confided to a separate magistracy.

ARTICLE THIRD.

OF THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The legislative power shall be vested in two distinct houses or branches; the one to be styled the senate, the other the house of representatives, and both together the general assembly. The style of their laws shall be: Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives in general assembly convened.

SECTION 2. There shall be a stated session of the general assembly, to be holden at Hartford biennially, on the Wednesday following the first Monday of the January next succeeding the election of its members. The person administering the office of governor may, on special emergencies, convene the general assembly at said place at any other time, and in case of danger from the prevalence of contagious disease in said place, or from other causes, he may convene said assembly at any other place in this state.

SECTION 3. On and after the Wednesday after the first Monday of January, 1903, the house of representatives shall consist of electors residing in towns from which they are elected, and for the purpose of apportioning representatives among the towns they shall be classified as follows:

Each town having a population of less than two thousand shall be entitled to one representative.

Each town having a population of two thousand and less than fifty thousand shall be entitled to two representatives.

Each town having a population of fifty thousand and less than one hundred thousand shall be entitled to three representatives.

Each town having a population of one hundred thousand or more shall be entitled to four representatives, and to one additional representative for each fifty thousand of population in excess of one hundred thousand.

The population of each town shall be determined by the census taken by authority of the United States next before the election of representatives is held.

Each town entitled to more than two representatives shall be divided into districts, and each district shall elect only one representative. The districts shall be composed of contiguous territory, and the general assembly shall have regard to the population of the several districts into which the town is divided, so that the same may be as nearly equal as possible.

Districts when once established shall not be changed until the session of the general assembly next after the completion of a census of the United States, which general assembly may alter them if found necessary to preserve a proper equality of population in said districts.

SECTION 4. On and after the Wednesday after the first Monday of January, 1903, the senate shall consist of forty-five members, chosen by districts.

One senator shall be elected from each district, and at the time of such election he shall be an elector in such district.

The general assembly, at the session held next after the adoption of this constitution, shall divide the state into forty-five districts for the choice of senators, which districts shall always be composed of contiguous territory; and in forming them regard shall be had to population, so that the districts shall be in that respect as nearly equal as possible under the limitations of this section, but in forming such districts the town of Greenwich may be joined with territory separated from it by the town of Stamford.

No town shall be divided except for the purpose of forming more than one district wholly within such town, and no county shall contain less than two districts.

The districts when established as herein provided shall not be changed until the session of the general assembly next after the completion of a census of the United States, which general assembly may alter them if found necessary to preserve a proper equality of population in said districts; after which said districts shall not be altered, except at the session of the general assembly next after the completion of a census of the United States; but no changes shall be at any time made except in accordance with the principles hereinbefore established.

SECTION 5. The secretary, treasurer, and comptroller shall canvass the votes for senators publicly. The person in each district having the greatest number of votes for senator shall be declared to be elected from such district. The return of votes and the result of the canvass shall be submitted to the house of representatives, and also to the senate, on the first day of the session of the general assembly. If no choice is made by the electors in any district in consequence of an equality of votes the house of representatives shall designate, by ballot, which of the candidates having such equal number of votes shall be declared to be elected; but each house shall be the final judge of the elections and qualifications of its own members.

SECTION 6. A general election for governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary, treasurer, comptroller, and members of the general assembly shall be held on the Tuesday after the first Monday of November, 1902, and biennially thereafter, and for attorney-general quadrennially. The general assembly shall enact laws regulating and prescribing the manner of voting at all elections, and also providing for the election of representatives at some time subsequent to the general election in those towns where the electors at the general election have failed to elect the representatives to which such towns shall be by law entitled, and for the election of senators or representatives if a vacancy occurs in either office.

SECTION 7. The members of the general assembly shall hold office for two years from the Wednesday following the first Monday of the January next succeeding their election, and until their successors are duly qualified.

SECTION 8. The house of representatives, when assembled, shall choose a speaker, clerk, and other officers. The senate shall choose a president pro tempore, a clerk, and other officers, except the president. A majority of each house shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each house may prescribe.

SECTION 9. Each house may determine the rules of its own proceedings, punish members for disorderly conduct, and, with the consent of two-thirds, expel a member, but not a second time for the same cause, and shall have all other powers necessary for a branch of the legislature of a free and independent state.

SECTION 10. Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and publish the same when required by one-fifth of its members, except such parts as, in the judgment of a majority, require secrecy. The yeas and nays of the members of either house shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered in the journal.

SECTION 11. The senators and representatives shall be privileged from arrest on civil process during and for four days before and after any session of the general assembly; and for any speech or debate in either house they shall not be questioned in any other place.

SECTION 12. The debates of each house shall be public, except on such occasions as, in the opinion of the house, require secrecy.

SECTION 13. The compensation of members of the general assembly shall be five hundred dollars in full for the term for which they are elected. The general assembly may, in addition to such compensation, provide by law for the transportation of each member or member-elect by public conveyance, by the most convenient route, between his home station and the place of meeting during the session of the general assembly to which he was elected, and until the general assembly shall by law take action thereon, the comptroller shall provide for such transportation.

ARTICLE FOURTH.

OF THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT

SECTION 1. The supreme executive power of the state shall be vested in the governor. No person who is not an elector of this state and who has not arrived at the age of thirty years shall be eligible to that office.

SECTION 2. The lieutenant-governor shall possess the same qualifications as are herein prescribed for the governor.

SECTION 3. The compensation of the governor and lieutenant-governor shall be established by law, and shall not be changed so as to take effect until after the election which shall next succeed the passage of the law establishing said compensation.

SECTION 4. The governor shall be commander-in-chief of the military and naval forces of the state, except when such forces are called into the service of the United States.

SECTION 5. He may require information in writing from the officers in the executive department on any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

SECTION 6. He may adjourn the general assembly to such time as he shall think proper, not beyond the day of the next stated session, in case of a disagreement between the two houses respecting the time of adjournment.

SECTION 7. He shall, from time to time, give to the general assembly information of the state of the government, and recommend to its consideration such measures as he shall deem expedient.

SECTION 8. He shall cause the laws to be faithfully executed.

SECTION 9. He may grant reprieves after conviction in all cases, except those of impeachment, until the end of the next session of the general assembly, but no longer.

SECTION 10. All commissions shall be in the name and by authority of the state of Connecticut; shall be sealed with the state seal, signed by the governor, and attested by the secretary.

SECTION 11. Every bill which shall have passed both houses of the general assembly shall be presented to the governor. If he approve, he shall sign and transmit it to the secretary, but if not, he shall return it to the house in which it originated, with his objections, which shall be entered in the journal of the house, and it shall proceed again to consider the bill. If after such reconsideration that house shall again pass the bill, it shall be sent, with the objections, to the other house, which shall also again consider it. If passed by that house, it shall become a law. In such cases the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the members voting for and against the bill shall be entered in the journal of each house respectively. If the bill be not returned by the governor within ten days, Sundays excepted, after it has been presented to him, it shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it; unless the general assembly, by adjournment, prevents its return, in which case it shall not be a law. In a bill for the appropriation of money containing several items the governor may approve or disapprove any of such items, in which case the bill shall become a law as to those items approved by him, and those disapproved by him shall be returned to the general assembly with his objections, and they shall not become a part of the law unless passed by both houses in the manner aforesaid; but no items except such as are returned by the governor within the time aforesaid may be disapproved by him, unless the general assembly by adjournment prevents such return.

SECTION 12. The lieutenant-governor shall, ex officio, be president of the senate, and have, when in committee of the whole, the right to debate, and, when the senate is equally divided, to give the casting vote.

SECTION 13. In case of the death, resignation, refusal or inability to serve, or removal from office, of the governor, or of his impeachment, or absence from the state, the lieutenant-governor shall administer the office of governor until another be chosen and duly qualified or until the governor impeached or absent shall be acquitted or return.

SECTION 14. In the event of the death, resignation, refusal or inability to serve, removal from office, impeachment, or absence from the state, of both the governor and lieutenant-governor, the president of the senate pro tempore shall, in like manner, administer the office of governor, until he be superseded by a governor or lieutenant-governor; and if there be no president pro tempore of the senate and the senate be not in session the secretary shall convene the senate for the purpose of choosing a president pro tempore.

SECTION 15. The secretary shall have the custody of and shall safely keep the public records and documents, and shall record the acts, resolutions, and orders of the general assembly, and perform all such duties as may be prescribed by law. He shall be the keeper of the seal of the state, which shall not be altered.

SECTION 16. The treasurer shall receive all money belonging to the state and disburse it only as directed by law. He shall pay no warrant or order for the disbursement of public money until it has been registered in the office of the comptroller.

SECTION 17. The comptroller shall adjust and settle all public accounts and demands, except grants and orders of the general assembly. He shall prescribe the mode of keeping and rendering all public accounts. He shall, ex officio, be one of the auditors of the accounts of the treasurer. The general assembly may assign to him other duties in relation to his office, and to that of the treasurer, and shall prescribe the manner in which his duties shall be performed.

SECTION 18. The governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary, treasurer, and comptroller shall hold their respective offices for two years, and the attorney-general for four years, from the Wednesday following the first Monday of the January next succeeding their election, and until their successors are duly qualified.

SECTION 19. Sheriffs shall be elected in the several counties quadrennially, on the Tuesday after the first Monday of November, and shall hold office for the term of four years from the first day of June following their election. They shall become bound, with sufficient sureties, to the treasurer of the state, for the faithful discharge of the duties of their office, in the manner prescribed by law. They shall be removable by the general assembly. If the sheriff of any county shall die, resign, or be removed from office by the general assembly, the governor may fill the vacancy occasioned thereby, until the same shall be filled by the next quadrennial election.

ARTICLE FIFTH.

OF THE JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of the state shall be vested in a supreme court of errors, a superior court, and such inferior courts as the general assembly may, from time to time, ordain and establish, the powers and jurisdiction of which courts shall be defined by law.

SECTION 2. Justices of the peace shall be chosen by the electors in the several towns. The time and manner of their election, the number in each town, and the period for which they shall hold their office, shall be prescribed by law. They shall have such jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases as the general assembly may prescribe.

SECTION 3. The judges of the supreme court of errors and of the superior court shall, upon nomination by the governor, be appointed by the general assembly in such manner as shall by law be prescribed. They shall hold office for the term of eight years, but may be removed by impeachment, and shall be removed by the governor on the address of two-thirds of each house of the general assembly. If any vacancy occurs in the supreme court of errors or superior court, when the general assembly is not in session, the governor may appoint a judge to fill such vacancy, until the rising of the next general assembly, or until the vacancy is filled by the action of the governor and the general assembly as hereinbefore provided. No judge or justice of the peace shall be capable of holding such office after he arrives at the age of seventy years. Any judge of the supreme court of errors or superior court who shall be retired from office on account of age shall thereupon become a state referee, whose powers and duties shall be defined by law.

The judges of the supreme court of errors and of the superior court shall receive a stated compensation to be fixed by the general assembly. Said compensation may be increased, but shall not be diminished during their terms of office.

SECTION 4. Judges of such courts of common pleas and of such district courts as are or may be established, shall be appointed for a term of six years, in the manner provided in section three for the appointment of judges of the supreme court of errors and superior court. If any vacancy occurs in the office of judge of either of such courts when the general assembly is not in session, the governor may appoint a judge to fill such vacancy, until the rising of the next general assembly, or until the vacancy is filled by the action of the governor and general assembly, as hereinbefore provided. Judges of such city courts, police courts, borough courts, and town courts, as are or may be established, shall be appointed for a term of two years.

SECTION 5. Judges of probate shall be chosen quadrennially, at the general election, by the electors residing in their respective districts. They shall hold office for four years from the Wednesday after the first Monday of the January next succeeding their election.

SECTION 6. The general assembly may ordain and establish a court or tribunal, composed of not less than three judges of the superior court, to review and pass upon errors of fact, or of law, or both.

ARTICLE SIXTH.

OF ELECTIONS AND ELECTORS.

SECTION 1. At the general election for the choice of state officers, members of the general assembly, and such other officers as now are or hereafter may be prescribed, the presiding officers shall receive the votes of the electors, which shall be by ballot, either written or printed, or by voting machine authorized by law, and shall count and declare them in the presence of the electors. When such votes have been so received and counted, duplicate lists of the persons voted for, and of the number of votes given for each, shall be made and certified by the presiding officer; one of which lists shall be deposited in the office of the town clerk within three days, and the other, within ten days after said election, shall be mailed or delivered under seal to the secretary, with an indorsement indicating the contents thereof. The votes so returned shall be counted, canvassed, and declared by the secretary, treasurer, and comptroller, within the month of November. The vote for secretary shall be counted, canvassed, and declared by the treasurer and comptroller only; the vote for treasurer shall be counted, canvassed, and declared by the secretary and comptroller only; and the vote for comptroller shall be counted, canvassed, and declared by the secretary and treasurer only. A fair list of the persons voted for and number of votes given for each, together with the returns of the presiding officers, shall be made by the secretary, treasurer, and comptroller, and laid before the general assembly on the first day of the next stated session thereof. In the election for governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary, treasurer, comptroller, and attorney-general, the person found by the general assembly, in the manner herein provided, to have received the greatest number of votes for each of said offices respectively, shall be declared by said assembly to be elected. If two or more persons shall be found to have an equal and the greatest number of votes for any of said offices, then the general assembly, on the second day of its session, by joint ballot of both houses, shall proceed without debate to choose said officer from a list of the names of the persons found to have an equal and the greatest number of votes for said office. The general assembly shall by law prescribe the manner in which all questions concerning the election of the above-named officers shall be determined.

SECTION 2. All persons who at the time of the adoption of this constitution are electors shall continue such, subject to its provisions and the laws of the state.

SECTION 3. Every male citizen of the United States who shall have attained the age of twenty-one years, who shall have resided in this state for one year next preceding, and in the town in which he may offer himself to be admitted to the privileges of an elector at least six months next preceding, the time he may so offer himself, and shall be able to read in the English language any article of the constitution or any section of the statutes of this state, and shall sustain a good moral character, shall, on taking such oath as may be prescribed by law, become an elector.

SECTION 4. The privileges of an elector shall be forfeited by a conviction of bribery, forgery, perjury, dueling, fraudulent bankruptcy, theft, or other offense for which an infamous punishment is inflicted. The general assembly may, by vote of two-thirds of the members of each house, restore the privileges of an elector to those who have forfeited them by a conviction of crime.

SECTION 5. Every elector shall be eligible to any office in this state, unless otherwise provided in this constitution.

SECTION 6. The selectmen and town clerk of the several towns shall decide on the qualifications of electors, at such times and in such manner as may be prescribed by law.

SECTION 7. Laws shall be made to support the privilege of free suffrage, prescribing the manner of regulating and conducting meetings of the electors, and prohibiting, under adequate penalties, all undue influence therein, from power, bribery, tumult, or other improper conduct.

SECTION 8. The electors shall be privileged from arrest, on civil process, during their attendance upon, and while going to, and returning from, any election of state officers or members of the general assembly.

ARTICLE SEVENTH.

SECTION 1. It being the duty of all men to worship the Supreme Being, the great Creator and Preserver of the universe, and their right to render that worship in the mode most consistent with the dictates of their consciences, no person shall by law be compelled to join or support, or be classed with, or associated to, any congregation, church, or religious association. Every person now belonging to such congregation, church, or religious association shall remain a member thereof until he shall have separated himself therefrom in the manner hereinafter provided. Each and every religious society or denomination shall have and enjoy the same and equal powers, rights, and privileges, and may support and maintain its ministers or teachers, and may build and repair houses for public worship by a tax on its members only, to be laid by a major vote of the legal voters assembled at a society meeting duly warned and held, or by funds obtained in any other lawful manner.

SECTION 2. If any person shall choose to separate himself from the religious society or denomination to which he may belong, and shall leave a written notice thereof with the clerk of such society, he shall not be liable for any expenses thereafter incurred by said society.

ARTICLE EIGHTH. OF EDUCATION.

SECTION 1. The charter of Yale College, as modified by agreement with the corporation thereof, in pursuance of an act of the general assembly passed in May, 1792, is hereby confirmed.

SECTION 2. The fund called the school fund shall remain a perpetual fund, the interest of which shall be inviolably appropriated to the support and encouragement of the public or common schools throughout the state, and for the equal benefit of all the people thereof. No law shall be made authorizing said fund to be diverted to any other use than the encouragement and support of public or common schools, among the several school societies or districts, as justice and equity shall require.

ARTICLE NINTH. OF IMPEACHMENT.

SECTION 1. The house of representatives shall have the sole power of impeachment.

SECTION 2. All impeachments shall be tried by the senate. When sitting for that purpose, the senators shall be on oath or affirmation. No person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the senators present. When the governor is impeached the chief justice shall preside.

SECTION 3. The governor and all other executive and judicial officers shall be liable to impeachment; but judgments in such cases shall not extend further than to removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under this state. The person convicted shall, nevertheless, be liable to indictment, trial, and punishment according to law.

SECTION 4. Treason against the state shall consist only in levying war against it, or adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort. SECTION 6. Neither the general assembly, except as provided in section 3 of article 5, nor any county, city, borough, town, school district, or
